(6) I have always been known by the surname Cohen which is the name which appears on my original birth certificate. My father, whose original surname was Cohen had been known for many years as Clayton. When my father made application in February 1974 for his surname to be changed officially from Cohen to Clayton I joined in the application on my own behalf since it was feared that my father's application would be jeopardised if I failed to do so. To please my father I intended to assume the surname Clayton if the application was granted. After the application was granted and my father officially assumed the surname Clayton I found that my friends, acquaintances and colleagues at work continued to call me Cohen, so that, although my surname is now officially Clayton I still continue to be known by the name Cohen. I am descended from the Cohanim, the ancient Hebrew priests, which is regarded as an honour among persons of the Jewish faith, and wish to retain this association. Moreover, the name Cohen is more Jewish in character than Clayton and more accurately reflects the religious persuasion of my wife and myself. I now realise that I was mistaken in believing that I could assume the name Clayton and that the other influences to which I have referred are more important than merely pleasing my father. Both my wife and I wish to resume the use of the name Cohen. My brother, Michael Mervyn is simultaneously making a similar application to change his surname from Clayton to Cohen. (7)—.
